

JUROR'S STATEMENT

It was a privilege and a pleasure to judge this year's RCAS Regional Exhibit. The body of work is an amazing array of dazzling genres and styles. It was truly a challenge to choose winners because so many works were so worthy.

My criteria for selecting winners centered on two broad areas of consideration. First, was observing that there was a concept and idea being portrayed, whether representational or non-representational. I view a winning concept as one that is clear in its intent and original in its creation. In other words, not something that has been seen over and over. The second criteria centers on the quality of the execution of a strong concept. This includes the design, composition, value, patterns, color, handling of materials and overall successful orchestration of all the above. Sometimes a piece might be stronger and more original in concept; other times the execution might be the stronger factor. When both come together, then it is clearly a winner.

All participants should feel proud in the achievement of being in this very exciting show.
