

Juror's Statement by Dawna Hamm Walsh, Ph.D.

Dawna Hamm Walsh, Ph.D. is a professor at the College of Fine Arts at the Dallas Baptist University and former Department of Art Chair (1978 - 2017). She is an experienced art juror, having judged numerous local and state exhibitions. "It has been an honor to adjudicate your membership show. The art talent within your group is stellar which presented challenges to my judging. You have every reason to be proud of this group! If your work placed, congratulations to you for your excellent entry. There were many deserving works of art that did not place due to the keen and close competition. If your art was not selected this time, do not be discouraged. Most importantly, keep on creating and growing through your art journey. May you all keep on sharing your creative processes, techniques, and encouraging one another. Bravo to each of you for contributing to this quality and well executed online art show!"

"What we do with the gifts of creative and artistic thinking is up to each of us. Creativity in art is the act of turning fresh innovative ideas into physical reality through passion and commitment. Artistic endeavor and creativity involve several processes: inspiration, planning, then birthing the artwork. Imagination is the new idea, but persistent production embodies your new idea to carry it over the finish line. If you have ideas but do not act on them, you are imaginative and perhaps a dreamer, but not devoted to the full creative process. If you also have artistic gifts but do not act on them, are you true to yourself?"
